CLOSING THOUGHTS

New Year

A new and untried year comes over the edge of the world.
It comes an unwrapped gift,
a perishable gift. It will not last,
but go the way all other years have gone.

It makes no stern demands upon our time;
It is simply here for us to do with as we will.

Perhaps some hard decisions are in store
or possibly some happenings
not counted on will rise
to test our strength.

We shall be giving and receiving
much in this new year.
Don't try to see a difference between the two. There isn't much.

It might be such a year that when it's gone
no dark regrets will linger in its wake,
but such contentment found that we can shout,
"Let's have another year, and many many more!"
